A procedure for estimation of total protein in cerebrospinal fluid (CSF) by the Lowry method and its application to inflammatory disorders of the central nervous system (CNS) are described. Comparison of the results obtained by this method with those determined by the Folin's phenol method showed good agreement. Addition of 1-10% trichloroacetic acid to CSF resulted in alterations in the Lowry protein determinations, but this effect could be corrected by the method described. The total protein in CSF ranged from 0.7 to 16.2 g/l in a group of children with acute CNS infections. The method is rapid, safe, and inexpensive. The overall recoveries of total protein were of the order of 94%.Q: How to open a tab in the current app window in macOS High Sierra? From now on, we will just be called 'MDV' or'mover'. Not really sure of the etiquette though. From the next year, MDV is planning to implement the following changes: 1) Server Migration We intend to move to a new server hosted in the USA within the next year. The server will have a bit more horsepower than the one currently used, and various new software and features will be rolled out. As part of the move, we will be moving the forums to a new sub-domain. This will result in a few minor changes to the layout and navigation of the site. We will begin moving the forums there early next year. For now, the migration will affect all "old mover" subdomains, including mover, mover.litestep, www.mover.litestep, etc. Please be patient and follow the forum rules as you must with everything else on MDV. You can follow the forum move in progress here: 2) Divisions From now on, every program on MDV will be divided into divisions. There will be three divisions: the General, Pro and Amateur divisions. General: Everything that has to do with moving in any capacity. The highest level there is 'Professional' and you can only apply for that if you have a business license for moving. Pro: Everything that has to do with moving with a TLC license (or TLC
