Venta de moca para Mm10- and Mn15-binding glycoproteins from the plasma membrane of rat brain. Cells from rat brain membranes were solubilized with Triton X-114 and the resulting detergent phase was chromatographed on a Sephacryl S-200 column. Twenty fractions were collected and analysed by gel filtration and sodium dodecyl sulfate/polyacrylamide gel electrophoresis. The purified glycoproteins were tested for their binding ability to mouse monoclonal antibodies (MoAbs) to the rat brain glycoproteins Mm10, Mm14, and Mm15. One bound to Mm14 and one bound to Mm10, but not to Mm15. The same fraction was also bound by MoAb RLB 731 to a 85-kilodalton polypeptide present in the Mm10-containing fraction and by MoAb RLB 720 to a 95-kilodalton polypeptide present in the Mm10- and Mm14-containing fraction. Thus, the membrane fraction contains two N-glycosylated proteins of apparent molecular weights of 105 and 85 kilodaltons and a polypeptide of 95 kilodaltons, which is in the Mm10-containing fraction and is immunologically related to the Mm10 polypeptide. Bloggers and bloggers writing often about Korean martial arts. - rohanjaneson I'm aware that there are tons of books about Korean martial arts on the market. But I've yet to see a good list of blogs that cover the topic. I'd like to see the blogosphere reflect the diversity of opinion found among the Korean martial arts scene. For example: Of course, there's 'Focus On Martial Arts', which has been around since 2004. Their focus is on field battle techniques like tae kwon do and karate. The two Korean schools who have the most influence in the martial arts world are Yupoongdo and Chosun Chonggyo. Aside from the articles that 'Focus On Martial Arts' publishes, they also sell a ton of books about Korean martial arts. The books are about 100-200 dollars each. It's a very healthy business for Yupoongdo and Chosun Chonggyo to be in.
